EAGLES BROODINGS

By GORDON MOORE

Now the Eagles Get Their Name To the students who have not been in Morehead long, it may be of interest to know how and when our athletic teams received their "nesting" this year.

On a certain evening during the fall semester of 1938, a special committee reported that the name "Eagle" had been selected from the many suggestions received. Miss Peach Kitting, former student here, contributed the winning name and received a $5.00 prize offered by Mr. T. M. Chrysler, a school friend. "Come On, You Bald Eagles" was also selected at the time from composition by the students. Since then, the name "Bald Eagles" has been bestowed to Eagles, at least, in practice. The school song has also been changed.

Mr. Chrysler reserved the right to use and suitable part of the selected title in naming his restaurant. He dubbed it "The Eagles Nest," since even an Eagle must refresh himself occasionally.

Coin Toss Takes Tournament To Winner

Brack Davis A Difficult Bracket

The 16th regular basketball tournament was held at the Morehead Wesleyan gymnasium at Winchester and the drawing, completed Sunday in Morehead, placed the teams in brackets for the use in the state with Jacksonville, Russell, Olive Hill, and Ashland grouped together.

Some of the favorites dropped, however, Russell and Jacksonville, favored at the M. Sterling Trojans, who were paired against Wolves in the upper bracket with Clark County and Tullahoma in the other half.

The flip of a coin, which was called "Eagle" by the Western representative, changed the state of the most, which has been held in Morehead for fifteen consecutive years. Here, they drew Jacksonville, Wesleyan and Morehead each receiving four votes.

Herbie Stitz and John Vickens of Lexington were the first choices to referee the tournament. The coaches nominated 18 officials but the list was cut to eight by the "striking off" method.

Carpenter Paves Way With 26 Points

With the memory of a 52-39 defeat still fresh in their minds, the Morehead College Eagles proved Thursday night that seven months later they were not the same. They handed the "home-stay" Thundering Herd their worst defeat of the season 57-37.

Little wonder on the squad never once hindered the Eagles' attack as Coach Miller substituted freely during the game. Harry Carpenter, veteran forward, opened

WATCH YOUR KITES, KIDS

By GORDON MOORE

Kite-flying, most innocent of childhood sports, can be dangerous.

That is the warning issued today by Frank R. Massey, manager of Kentucky Utilities Company, inciting precautions which help combat the possibility of a serious accident when the spring winds tempt young enthusiasts. He advised:

1. For a kite string use only a stout, dry cord. Never use wire, wet cord with wire threads in it, since these conduct electricity should the string come in contact with electric wires or should there be an electrical storm.
2. Choose a level, open space free from all wires, large trees, large stones, ditches and fences.
3. Do not fly a kite from the roof of a building or other elevated structure. Risk of a fall is too great.
4. Do not fly a kite on a street or highway, where there is danger of being hit by a car.
5. Do not climb poles to retrieve a kite lodged in wires or trees. LEAVE IT THERE. Do not throw a kite attached to a string over wires for electric shock might result.
6. "In other words," Massey commented, "it is better to lose a kite than a life. Every parent should impress on his children the danger of flying kites in the vicinity of electric lines, as well as the other safety rules outlined."

four years, he has trained more than 15,000 business and professional men—more than any other living man—this is why he could write such an educational book.

The sole purpose of this book is to help you solve the biggest problem of getting along with and influencing people in your everyday business and social contacts.

A few ways to make people like you, as given by Mr. Carnegie are:

1. Become interested in other people.

2. Smile.

3. Be a good listener. Encourage others to talk about themselves.

4. Throw down a challenge.

5. If you are wrong, admit it quickly and willingly.

Although this book was not written for sale it has become the world's fastest selling book. Why? Because it fills a universal need. Everybody longs to have more friends, to have more influence and more happiness.
